

While considering rule changes to existing telephone privacy law will you please review Indiana's law and make sure you do nothing to dilute it. My phone number was on the first list of names published as being off-limits to telemarketers and we enjoyed immediate relief from the incessant phone calls we had been receiving. An evening at home had become a nightmare of telephone sales calls and now we might get one out of a hundred and they are immediately discouraged when we tell them we are on the do-not-contact-or-you-will-be fined list. As Indiana Attorney General Steve Carter said in a recent news report, "Our law is working, it's effective, and we just want to keep it in place."
